Swing Voters: Target in Sunday Debate

By David S. Broder and Richard Morin Vashungton Post Service

WASHINGTON - Vice President George Bush's narrow lead over Governor Michael S. Dukakis in a poll of likely voters lies wholly among the one in four voters who say they might switch by Election Day, mak-ing the first televised debate between the candidates on Sunday particularly crucial. The swing voters are obviously the prime target for both men in the encounter Sunday in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Who are the voters, and what do they have on their mmds?

Their single most striking characteristic is that they say they need to know a lot more about Mr. Dukakis before they can make their choice.

The Washington Post-ABC News poll shows Mr. Bush leading, 50 percent to 46 percent overall. But aime out of 10 of the undecided who lean toward Mr. Dukakis and more than 8 out of 10 of the undecided who lean toward Mr. Bush say that they need to hear more from the Democratic contender. By contrast half those leaning toward Mr. Bush and two-thirds of those inclined toward Mr. Dukakis say they lack sufficient information on Mr. Bush.

These findings tend to underline that the stakes in the debate, while high for both candidates, are far greater for Mr. Dukakis than for Mr. Bush. The impression that Mr. Dukakis makes - positive or negative could change many more minds. The vice president and the Massachusetts governor are running dead even among the three in four voters surveyed who say that NEWS ANALYSIS

they have made a firm choice and are unlikely to shift The rest of the voters, the uncertain ones are people in the middle, according to The Post's analysis of interviews with 1,267 likely voters completed Monday. They are self-described moderates of middle income, more likely to be living in the Middle West or the East than the South or the West. Those who qualify their support for Mr. Bush tend to be under 40 years old; those who are provisionally for Mr. Dukakis are mostly 40 to 60; relatively few are of retirement age.

They are people whose teniative judgment of the Republican vice presidential candidate. Senator Dan Quayle of Indiana, is highly unfavorable.

The Democratic vice presidential candi-date, Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, has a higher favorability score among possible Bush supporters than Mr. Quayle does — 31 percent to 23 percent Possible Dukakis supporters have a six-to-one favorable view of Mr. Bentsen and an almost three-to-one unfavorable view of Mr. Quayle with large numbers having no impression.

Ministers Reject IMF Call on Debt Relief

The most important issues to those who are provisionally in the Bush column are drugs, crime, maintaining family values and dealing with the budget deficit, with taxes and jobs just a bit behind. The Strategie Defense Initiative is less important to these voters than to his strong adherents; dealing with the deficit and providing access to college are more important.

For the questionable Dukakis supporters, too, drugs and crime lead the list of issues, with jobs, the deficit and family values be-hind them. But those leaning toward Mr. Dukakis backers attach less importance to the jobs issue, college access and child care than do those firmly in his column, suggest ing that his emphasis on those issues may not be the best tool for cementing the wavering supporters.

Mr. Bush's strongest weapon with these swing voters lies in the area of the military and an anti-Communist foreign policy. Pro visional Dukakis supporters rate Mr. Bush over Mr. Dukakis by almost two to one as better qualified to maintain a strong military, and they spbt over which candidate would do a better job of keeping international Communism in check.

On the other hand, when it comes to helping the poor and the elderly, provisional Bu supporters give a clear edge to Mr. Dukakis, and the Democrat is at least breaking even in BERLIN - The finance ministers of West Germany and the Netherlands, rejecting a call by the head of the International Monetary Fund, said Friday that they op-posed the principle of global debt forgiveness for heavily indebted countries.

But the ministers, Gerhard Stoltenberg of West Germany and H. Onno Ruding of the Netherlands, stressed that they were not arguing against debt relief for the poorest nations. Rather, they said, they were rejecting the principle of global debt forgiveness in favor of case-by-case "market-based solutions" for such middle-income debtor aa-

But to many, the journalist: a familiar story. A rightist press baron, Robert Hersant, steals the 39-year-old editor of France's leading leftist weekly: another story altogether.

"If you had told me two weeks ago that I would be going to Figaro I would have just langhed," said the editor, Franz-Olivier Giesbert.

The emotional ordeal of resolving to leave Le Nouvel Observateur, the weekly where he had spent his entire journalistic career, cost Mr. Giesbert several kilograms and many nights of sleep. Despite his boyish good looks, he appeared haggard, his collar was too big and his suit hung limply. Yet Mr. Giesbert's drama is more than a personal one. Mr. Her-sant's decision to name him editor of Le Figaro, a fiercely committed. conservative daily oewspaper, is an upheaval that seems destined to deprive the French right of a strident megaphone, mellowing the tonali-ties of political discourse in the nation

The abrupt shifting of gears at Le Figaro is a delayed reaction to President François Mitterrand's reelection in May. Mr. Hersant had thrown Le Figaro's great weight and prestige into the scales against the Socialist president and in favor of his conservative challenger, Jacques Chirac.

Italian and German Firms Accused Over Sales of Rocket Technology

By Joseph Fitchett tional Herald Tribune PARIS - Italian and West German companies, skirting govern-ment embargoes, sold rocket techcology in the mid-1980s that helped Argentina and Egypt, with Iraqi support, develop a medium-range ballistic missile, according to a new book.

The book is about Giovanni Ag-nelli, chairman of the Fiat industrial complex.

The missile, known as the Condor-2 in Argentina and the Badar-2000 in Egypt and capable of carrying ooclear or chemical warheads, is the target of Western concern about violations of the Missile Technology Control Regime.

Intended to prevent Third World nations from acquiring mediumrange missiles, the pact was signed in 1987 by the United States, Italy, West Germany and four other leading industrial nations. Possible Soviet adhesion to it is to be dis-

Privately, officials confirmed that Mr. Mitterrand was weighing the possibility of holding up on the missile, but said that he could postpone making any such proposal along these lices for several months.

In their public comments after the International Heraid Tribune reported Friday that France was exploring the idea of delaying dethree years, officials reiterated France's opposition to any discussion of the French nuclear deterrent in organisations on conventional arms in Europe. The East-West ocgotiations are to be held in Vien- Clarification na, possibly by the end of this year.

A French official close to Mr. Mitterrand, who asked not to be further identified, said Thursday that France might, without negoti-ating, delay development of the Hades as "a form of leverage" to pressure the Soviet leader, Mikhail

5. Gorbachev, to deliver on his stated readiness to climinate Warsaw Pact military superiority in Europe.

The oewspaper Le Monde noted Friday that Mr. Mitterrand already had publicly linked nuclear and conventional arms when he urged NATO nations in the spring to de-lay modernizing the alliance's naclear weapons in Europe for two or three years, enough time to judge Soviet behavior in talks on conventional forces.

Postponing Hades, French military specialists said Friday, would fit Mr. Mitterraud's position in fa-vor of reducing all the remaining tactical nuclear weapons in Europe. These arms have encountered political oppositioo in West Ger-many. Mr. Mitterrand announced his position after the signing in De-cember of the treaty eliminating U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear forces.

In addition, the most likely option for deploying the Hades by its target date in the mid-1990s, an expert noted, would involve equipping it with a neutron-bomb war-head, the weapon that aroused fierce public protests in West Ger-many when the United States proposed building it.

French officials have acknowledged for several years that France has the technical capability to make a neutron bomb.

"It would appear doubly provoc-ative to West Germans if France built the Hades, which would hit West German territory in war, and if France built the ocutron bomb to do so." a military expert said. Defense Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement, in a magazine intermeetings." view published Thursday, reaffirmed France's commitment to the Hades, but added that France's nuclear deterrence would increasingly depend on missile-carrying stratesic submarines. Angola

A Washington Post-ABC News poll, described in an article Thursday, included some incorrect results based on data improperly processed by the firm hired to conduct the poll. The error produced flawed results of seven questions about such personal characteristics as experience, hone-ty, ability to be trusted in a crisis and ability to get things done. The Pos had reported that Governor Michael S. Dukakis had made gains in public approval in those areas and was drawing close to Vice President Goorg Bush. However, the poll results on those questions were flawed and bush de discounted. The second seco should be discounted. The results for the overall voter preference quettion and all other questions in the poll were unaffected.

THE HUSTINGS

Bush Stresses Military Technology

'HOUSTON (NYT) - Vice President George Bush has proposed that the United States seek to counter the Soviet Union's advantage in conventional forces, not by matching Moscow "bullets for bullets" but by more effective strategic planning that would take advantage of the U.S. edge in technology and some weapons systems. The proposal Thursday night appeared to be an attempt by Mr. Bush to provide an alternative to Governor Michael S. Dukakis's call for more spending on conventional forces. That issue has emerged as a pronounced difference between Mr. Bush and his Democratic opponent in the presidential race.

Mr. Bush said the proposal was based on existing weapons systems and others being developed. His staff did not provide a detailed briefing on the proposal, which they said Mr. Bush would be emphasizing over the next few weeks

"It is based on the idea of putting our strengths against our competi-tors' weaknesses in order to maximize the value of our military invest-ments and devalue that of our competitors," Mr. Bush said. "It is designed to ensure that we need not match the Soviets bullets for bullets and tank for tank."

Debaters Agree on Questioners WASHINGTON (NYT) — The campaigns of Mr. Bush and Mr. Dukakis have agreed on whom they would allow to ask questions Sunday night at their first debate. The panel of questioners will be Peter Jennings, anchorman of ABC's evening news; John W. Mashek, national political correspondent of The Atlanta Constitution, and Anae Groer, political writer of The Orlando Sentinel

Jim Lehrer of public television's "MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour" will moderate the 90-minute debate, which will be held in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. All three major television networks as well as Cable

News Network and C-Span will broadcast it live. The two campaigns had been negotiating for days over the choice of questioners. The Dukakis campaign had proposed the anchors of the three networks and CNN. The Bush campaign held that reporters traveling with the candidates should be excluded.

Cuomo Implies He Won't Run in '92

NEW YORK (AP) - Governor Mario M. Cuomo of New York says he probably will seek re-election in 1990, and if he does, it would virtually rule out a possible presidential campaign in 1992.

"It would be very unlikely I won't run," said Mr. Cuomo when asked about seeking a third four-year term. "What else would I do for a living?" Mr. Cuomo spoke on a flight Thursday to New York from Boston, where he offered debate advice to Mr. Dukakis. The Democratic gover-nor said running for re-election in two years would almost certainly rule out any presidential bid in 1992 should Mr. Dukakis lose this year.

BOSTON - Vice President George Bush swooped into Michael S. Dukakis's territory to revel in the endorsement of a Boston police union, but the Democrat counterpunched by mustering law enforcement officials from around the nation for a red-white-and-blue rally. For Mr. Bush, the endorsement was a political windfall in his attempt to indict Mr. Dukakis as a liberal who is weak on crime. He said he honored victims' rights, "not just the rights of criminals." The Dukskis campaign responded with the rally, at which Governor Marin M. Cuomo of New York accused Mr. Bush of talking tough on crime while being part of an administration that had ne-

Survey Shows Bush Leading Dukakis on Issue of Defense

By E.J. Dionne Jr. New York Times Service WASHINGTON - Vice President George Bush leads Governor Michael S. Vietnam, which is under Soviet pressure to withdraw from Cambodia as part of Moscow's new policy of extricating itself from regional conflicts, said earlier this year that by the end of 1988 it would remove 50,000 of the roughly 120,000 soldiers it is believed to have stationed in Cambodia.

But three months before its own deadline, it has made oo visible preparations for withdrawal, Cam-bodian and other Asian diplomats say, arousing fears that it plans a swift evacuation at the end of the year that will create a power vacuum the Khmer Rouge will then try to fill. Some reports in the West, bowever, dispute the diplomats' claim. For example, Vietnam reportedly withdrew 20,000 troops late last year; this year, Hanoi's top

der returned to Vietnam. Evangelicals Score In Pro Sports World

Every major league baseball team has permitted religious services in the clubhouse for the past 10 years or more, the Los Angeles Times reports. Ministries have become well estab-lished in professional football and basketball as well.

The ministries are preponderantly evangelical, fundamentalist Protestant. "I would think all of our chapel coordinators are born-again Christians," said David Swanson, national director of Baseball Chapel Inc. So are most of the prominent athletes known for their testimonies of faith, like the former basketball ace Julius Erving; the former football star Roosevelt Grier, Tom Landry, coach of football's Dallas Cow-Barry opposes the change, and its fate in the Senate is uncertain. boys; and Carl Lewis, who knelt in prayer after winning the 200-meter race in the 1984 Olympics.

One office already moving from city to suburbs is that of former President Richard Nixon. Mainline Protestants, Roman He is giving np his 10-room suite in downtown Manhattan for a Catholics and Jews have limited visibility in sports. One reason cited for this, the Times said, is that they tend to urge people to building within walking distance of his Saddle River, New Jersey, estate. The rent will cost U.S. go to church, while evangelicals offer specialized ministries for taxpayers $137,800 a year, or $200 more than his New York office. Mr. Nixon, 75, had grown tired of commung for as long as particular groups. which to judge the contest and resist the "spin control" of partisan opinion-manipulators. In the light of that need, this pundit shall not flag or fail. Neither of the participants is likely to score a knockout, but one might win on points, as Walter Mondale did in 1984's opener (and a lot of good it did him). Here is a handy-dandy debate score-card designed to transform the most cottage-fried couch pottor ison a new manuard activity.

The Haitians Still Hope

One general had barely replaced another when soldiers mutinied, workers struck and killing returned to the streets. Yet the soldiers who engineered the coup ap-pear to share with the public a wish to rid Haiti of the brutal, arrogant daily lawless-ness. The Haitians, for all their desperate poverty, have not given up. Hain's best hope now bes in the fact that Lieutenant General Prosper Avril is smarter and more pragmarie than his predecessor, Lieutenant General Henri Nampby. If General Avril can establish his power, his next goal is likely in be restoring the American aid Haiti desperately needs. The aid ended when elections were aborted in November. Getting it back will require credible steps toward democracy.

First, however, must come some modicum of order. General Avril's best move to re-establish it would be to support the soldiers trying to oust officers who have brutally quashed trade union activities and killed opposition leaders. He also will have to listen to those in the streets who want justice done in the cases of men like the mayor of Port-au Prince, Franck Romain, said to be responsible for the gruesome slaughter nf a dozen worshipers

Haiti suffered through another coup last weekend only to sink into new turmoil. As for democracy. Haiti's political reformers have welcomed General Avril's early pledges on human rights and national reconciliation, and his choice of a largely civilian cabinet. But they remain cautious. Since the end of Duvalierism in 1986, they have been rewarded with little but coups and sham elections. In any case, restoring Haiti's constitution will require more than speeches and appointments. General Avril ought to bring the army and the opposition together to talk, set dates for elections and provide the security to make them genuine. Meanwhile, General Avril will have to steer clear of sharing power with Colonel Jean-Claude Paul, who has been indicted on drug-trafficking charges in the United States. General Avril wisely did not appoint Colonel Paul to head the armed forces, as some had predicted, but the colonel continues as commander of a key military unit and his future remains open. As for the impoverished Haitians' future, it is hard to be optimistic. The new constitution was trampled before it ever took life. Attempts at elections have drowned in blood. For now Haitian hopes depend on how well General Avril can restore the order on which freedom, and U.S. aid, depend. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Wright Was Out of Line

The statement by House Speaker Jim Wright on the CIA — that the agency had admitted to a role in sparking and Sandinista protests in Nicaragua to provoke the Sandinistas into overreaction that would kick back on them - has had these results;

First, the statement is a savage blow to the Nicaraguan civic opposition - the legal political opposition - and especially to the 38 Nicaraguans who were arrested July 10 in a peaceful protest at Nandaime and who now face trial. The worst political thing that can befall an opposition figure there is to be accused of being a CIA agent rather than a self-starting democrat. You will recall that Mr. Wright and others of his persuasion successfully defunded the contras, reducing the military option of the resistance in the near-disappearing point, precisely to give a chance to a democratic political process.

The statement also has implications for American efforts to extend a hand to local democratic forces elsewhere. It becomes easier in, say, South Africa, Poland or Chile for unrepresentative governments to embarrass citizen challengers who have even the slightest and most innocuous contacts with foreign well-wishers.

The statement may hurt the pending bill to tighten the terms of executive notice to Congress of covert operations - a bill supported by the speaker that the executive branch and conservatives have fought on the ground that Congress cannot keep secrets. Mr. Wright suggests that, when he spoke, the Nicaraguan resistance and The Washington Times were already putting the allegation of a CIA hand into the public domain and that other news organizations had made similar reports. But this explanation fails to consider either the particular confidentiality obligations of an elected afficial or the crucial authority that a congressional with their followers. The swelling tide of successful hooks and films about the American experience in Vietnam speaks elo-quently to the cultural point. The wide interest that is being stirred by the arrival of Neil Shechan's brilliantly reported book on Colonel John Pani Vann, "A Bright Shunng Lie," is the latest sign of this cugerness to re-ex-amine the Vietnam experience and its meaning. The important policy areas here are economic decentralization, cultural and youth ex-changes, and freedom of information. What political perversity: a presidential campaign is just when the country most needs and expects to consider harsh federal facts, yet when someone dares even mention them, he is denounced.

The National Economic Commission was created to devise a bipartisan deficit reduction plan that could be embraced by the next president and Congress. The point was tn neutralize politicking over touchy issues like Social Security and taxes.

Mr. Strauss thought that he was only telling "the cold, hard truth, which the public is entitled to understand." But he touched sensitive nerves. The Bush and Dukakis campaigns, as well as two of Mr. Strauss's fellow Democrats on the commission, quickly jumped on him.

The commission has not tried to reach any conclusions nn spending cuts vet, even

Then Mr. Strauss and the Republican co-

And there is a common suspicion that November's winner - whoever be is — will come around once safely in office. Mr. Strauss, one of Washington's savviest political hands, said of Mr. Bush's public stance: "I know George Bush, and I know be knows better."

Time to Meet the Press

There are 168 hours in the week. The presidential candidates, so far as anyone can tell, spend about 169 of them posing in from of bokey backdrops, perfecting their sound bite of the day, and huddling with advisers, pollsters and drama coaches as they plan their next cameo appearance.

George Bush has been especially insulat-ed from press inquiry in the campaign. Reporters traveling 'with" him are essen-tially peaned off from contact not just with Mr. Bush but with his aides and even his conference. spokesmen. The vice president is kept at sbouting distance from journalists, and be does not make himself available to them in press conferences. Mr. Bush essentially is under heavy guard, as if be or his assistants nr both were afraid of letting him enter the ordinary give-and-take of encounters with the press. Michael Dukakis, at first more accessible, has begun getting scarcer.

We are aware that there are few complaints to which people listen with less sympathy than those that emanate from a press that considers itself wronged. But there is much more than journalistic resemment at issne here. In an age of public

Munich, 1938: What Might Have Been

LONDON — Thursday will be the south anniversary of the Munich agreement, when Britain and France capitulated to German demands on Czechoslovakia - thereby making their guarantee to Poland irrevocable, and World War II inevitable. But what is the true lesson of Munich? The agreement, to which Czechoslovakia was not a party but to which it yielded, required Prague to cede its German-speaking Sudeten area to Germany and certain other disputed territories to Poland and Hungary. In return the great powers guaranteed what remained of Czechoslovakia - a worthless guarantee, as it turned out. From the time Hitler first made demands on Czechoslovakia, Prime

"When, after Munich, we were in a position to examine Czechoslovak military strength from within, what we saw greatly disturbed us; we had nin a serious danger. The plan pre-pared by the Czech generals was for-midable." General Wilhelm Keitel, the German chief of staff, said at his Nuremberg trial that the Munich agreement had been a great relief because the officers of the high command "did not believe themselves strong enough at that moment" to take Czechoslovakia.

Also, what neither knew, a plan existed in the German high command to arrest and depose Hitler if he provoked general war by attacking Czechoslovakia. Whether this plan would have succeeded is open to question, but the attempt certainly would have provoked a crisis in the regime. If the Czecboslovaks had defended themselves, Hitler never would have Britain in turn would presumably have become engaged. One cannot say how all this would have ended. It is a fact, however, that the German general staff in 1938 did not regard Germany as in a state of military preparation sufficient to conduct a war on two fronts.

One only speculates. It is possible, though, to think that Hitler could have been stopped in 1938 for a fraction of the bloodshed and grief that were exacted in the years to follow.

At the urging of the prince, France has taken on a significant role in orchestrating the peace negotia-tions that Sihanouk will conduct here in November with the Vietnameseinstalled Cambodian ruler, Hun Sep. But the United States remains skep-

But the slowdown was the result of the increasingly effective attacks of the Khmer Rouge, who benefit from Washington's failure to pressure Chi-pa and Thailand into cutting off military aid and sanctuary to the Pol Pot forces. This is more a self-fulfilling prophecy created by the State Depart ment than genuine skepticism.

The State Department practiced creative and effective diplomacy in probing and pushing the Soviets to follow through on their decision to withdraw from Afghanistan. The re-cord on Vietnam and Cambodia is the opposite. "They have fooled us too many times," one senior U.S. official explains of the reluctance to test the Vietnamese in any constructive way.

WEST BERLIN Modernization Program Boosts Local Economy

Dismissed as a "dying city" in the 1970s, West Berlin is once again economically on the move. New firms, new jobs and a growing population have brought new prosperity to the divided city.

The city seems to be in an upbeat medium term." Mr. Pieroth's remood, a fact confirmed by the surging numbers of tourists arriving at Tegel Airport, lured by the whirl of cultural activity. green forests, handsome lakes and splendid shopping possibilities. The two-mile-long Kurfürstendamm boulevard, which only five years ago looked shabby and seedy, is now vibrant with sidewalk cafés, chic boutiques and art galleries.

The city's governing mayor,

Over 350 enterprises moved to Berlin in the 1980s

Eberhard Diepgen, beams as he tells you that today West Berlin is a "city of two million people again." Four years ago Berlin's population was down to 1.8 million, and experts were darkly predicting that the number of people living in the city would decline to 1.5 million.

But the influx of people of German ethnic origin from Poland, the Soviet Union and Romania, the increase in the number of East Germans allowed to move to the West, and a renewed willingness among young West Germans to settle in the city have all dramatically changed the demographic picture.

The recent flood of arrivals may have placed an additional strain on the labor market, but it has also given West Berlin new creative impulses and vitality.

Elmar Pieroth, West Berlin's 20,000 arrivals from the East were mark, made at a recent press conference in City Hall, was a reply to those who had expressed fears that the wave of newcomers posed a threat to Berliners' jobs.

West Berlin's work force now stands at 878,500 --- its highest level for 12 years. In the past five years, 42,000 new jobs have been created in West Berlin, many of them in the service sector, said Mr. Pieroth, a Rhinelander who first came to the city in 1981.

Still, he concedes, with 95,000 Berliners (11 percent) out of work, the city has a worrisome unemployment problem. The West German average is slightly lower (9.5 per-cent), and Mr. Pieroth said every-thing was being done in West Berlin to reduce the level. A dramatic reduction is unlikely in the foreseeable future, though he points out that the youth jobless level was down to 3,200 in July, 13.9 percent lower than in the corresponding pe-riod last year. "That is somewhat encouraging," he said. Despite Mr. Pieroth's insistence that his government is trying to combat the problem, the opposition are accusing him of callousness and complacency. Walter Momper, the leader of the Social Democrat Party (SPD) in Berlin, says his party will make the plight of the jobless a major campaign issue in the upcom-ing January 1989 city government elections.

The SPD has suffered a series of reversals since losing power in Ber-Economic Minister, said a further lin almost eight years ago, and is still trying to improve its image expected this year. "We welcome among Berliners - so far without these people," he said. "As far as much success. gen's administration will be returned to power -possibly with an increased majority.

In the first half of 1988 the economy was on the upswing, producing results which surprised the experts who had reckoned with a downturn in the wake of last October's stock market crash. Orders for West Berlin-made products shot up by ten percent over the same period last year.

Foreign buyers have been placing more orders in the capital goods sector. Berlin's economy, measured in terms of the city's gross product, had a growth rate of 3 to 3.5 percent in the first six months of 1988. Despite periodic oscillation, industrial production has been steadily expanding now for five and a half years. One of West Berlin's more recent achievements has been not only to halt, but in some cases to reverse, the erosion of the industrial landscape that was turning Berlin into a "dying city" in the 1970s. This has

World Bank Meetings Scheduled for Berlin

Bankers, journalists and others have shown unprecedented interest in this year's IMF and World Bank meetings, in part because of their proximity to European banking centers.

Scheduled to be held in West Berlin from September 27 to 29, the meetings are the first to be held in Europe since 1979, when they were held in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. The most recent IMF/World Bank meetings in Western Europe were in 1970 in Copenhagen, Denmark. Some 10,000 people or more are expected to attend, including 1,200 officials comprising delegations from 151 nations. More than 3,000 commercial bankers and 1.000 journalists are also expected. Recent meetings in Washington, D.C., and Seoul, South Korea, drew about 9.000 people, said Graham New-man, IMF assistant chief information officer in Washington. The increase in attendance is probably accounted for by European bankers, he said.

Over 3,000 bankers will congregate in Berlin

The event will focus on the international economic outlook, Mr. Newman said. Main issues will include debt in developing nations, debt strategy, progress in coordinating international economic policies, increasing IMF funds, and further allocations of special drawing rights, About 300 discussions are scheduled, as well as meetings of the G-10 industrialized nations and the G-24 developing nations.

Many consider the congresses not only the most significant in the city's history, but the greatest ever in the nation.

"These are the biggest congresses. to date in the Federal Republic, both in terms of its size and its significance," said Wolf-Dietricb Gross, deputy general manager of the meetings' Coordination Office in Berlin.

All hotels in West Berlin are expected to be full during the meet-ings, the Berlin Tourism Office said. Visitors have been forced to look for accommodations in neighboring East Germany, filling up three major tourist hotels in East Berlin. Airlines have scheduled additional flights to Berlin during the event.

Logistical preparations, started two years ago, will occupy up to 600 people when the meetings begin. Some 551 sound-resistant offices have been installed near the congress center. A new printing facility will churn out 5 million documents during the meetings. More than 100 buses and vans have been procured to transport participants.

Telecommunications have been enhanced with 408 additional telephone lines, 1,400 extensions and almost 50 kilometers of cable. A data network with 30 terminals has been installed at the congress center and at hotels, supplying participants with information from flight schedules to restaurant addresses and sight-seeing programs.

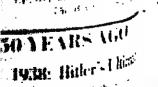

The meetings have also generated great interest with opposition groups such as the Green environmental party. Posters in Berlin and other German cities urge activitists to go to Berlin, where demonstrations are planned against 1MF/ World Bank policies.

Previous meetings, such as the one in Copenhagen, have seen some violence, prompting Berlin to take security measures. "We are pre-pared for everything," Mr. Gross said. Berlin's policies will be reinforced with additional officers. The meetings, which will cost the European Community are moving towards economic integration, and it is generally agreed that the creation of a unified internal market, as stipulated by the Single European Act, must also have an impact on monetary policy. Indeed, if intra-Community exchange rates are still permitted to fluctuate and restrictions on capital movements remain in place, the dream of a truly "common market" may never become reality. For this reason, many are calling for closer mooetary cooperation-and above all for the establishment of a European central bank, which is essential for the coordination of moottary and interest-rate policies. In West Germany in particular, however, experts have long argued that a European central bank can only come as the culmination of a process in which economic and fiscal policies are fully harmonized. But an assessmeot of European monetary cooperatioo over the past decade suggests just the opposite namely, that a joint monetary policy can spur economic cooperation, promoting convergence and integration. In fact, expansion of the institutional framework of European monetary policy must go hand io hand with the integration of the national capital markets. Coordination is even more essential in the other policy domains. In order to work, a often at the expense of dom-

The twelve members of single internal market will oeed more than just a "Europeanized" monetary policy. It will also require a commoo fiscal policy as well as a wage policy which is sensitive to the regional and sectoral differences within this vast ecooomic zone. There is a growing realization that a unified European market in which monetary policy transcended national borders, while fiscal and wage policy did not, would be doomed to failure. No alternative exists to such integration-as experience with the international monetary system has shown. Political independence

Europe needs a central bank that is not only responsible in theory for maintaining the stability of the European curreocy; it must also be given the tools to do the job in practice. Such an institution must be accorded the maximum degree of political independence at both the national and EC levels. Moreover, if the central bank is to successfully preserve monetary stability, a strict separation will have to be maintained hetween the twin tasks of circulating money and funding govern-

East-West Thaw Brings Breakthrough in Trade

In the wake of Glasnost and Perestroika, the countries of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (Comecon) are modernizing their economies and showing new eagerness for closer connections with the European Community.

Prior to the August announcement, a joint declaration had already been signed in June by the EC and Comecon for the "development of cooperation in all fields of common interest."

The West Berlin government is excited by this breakthrough. Eberhard Diepgen, the city's able and foresighted young governing mayor, sees real chances being offered. Addressing businessmen in West Berlin recently. he talked in glowing terms of the city as an "eastern advance post of the European Community" serving as a hridge between the Common Market and Comecon-trading countries to which, he emphasized, "770 million people belong."

belong." So far, East-West trade has not been at an impressive level, hut the 44-year-old mayor says the reshaping of the Soviet Union's economy and society has greatly improved chances for expansion in the 1990s. "We are watching the new developments very closely so that the new forms of East-West exchange do not go past the city." he says. Before World War 11, a third of

Before World War II. a third of all Berlin's industrial products were delivered to regions now situated in the German Democratic Republic (East Germany). But post-war divisions dealt a death blow to this trade.

Nobody believes that it could be revived on such a large scale again. But there is no reason why the city — given its strength in the electroWest Berlin economic experts see bright prospects for their city as a center for East-West trade. East Germany's announcement in August that it was establishing official ties with the EC is just one expression of the new mood.

technical, machine construction, food and chemical manufacturing industries — should not find avenues for its products and expertise in the GDR.

Dr. Günter Braun, general manager of West Berlin's Chamber of Trade and Industry, believes that the city's unusual location close to East Berlin, the GDR and neighboring socialist state-trading countries offers favorable opportunities for East-West economic relations. He noted Berlin's excellent flight connections, good road, rail and canal links, and maintained there was no bar to "doing business in many sectors of common interest."

As Mayor Diepgen frequently points out, besides being the largest industrial center between Paris and e. East it was issues of 519.7 million Deutsche marks (a one percent increase over 1986). The euphoric expectations trade fairs, congresses and exhibitions of major international repute. If West Berlin makes good use of its many advantages, Mayor Diepgen and Economics Minister Elmar Pieroth are convinced that West Berlin could become a gateway for the socialist state-trading nations to enter the much talked about "Binnenmarkt" — or Internal European Market — in time for 1992. West Berlin would especially like to improve trade with East Germany. The GDR chiefly supplies West Berlin with oil products and items which are expensive to transport such as coal sand and gravel, as well as some agricultural and fishery products and textiles, while West Berlin delivers electro-technical, machine and conveyance-huilding products to the GDR.

"At present, the Berlin Senate is making every effort to huild up trade with the GDR and improve its quality and professional services. GDR authorities are also trying to do the same, though by the nature of things there it is much more difficult for them to achieve this." Mr. Pieroth said.

There has always been an imbalance in West Berlin-GDR trade. with purchases from East Germany registering almost three times the level of the city's sales. In 1987.

West Berlin's purchases from the reduced and common sense prevails occurred in January. An agreement was reached among the East German trade organization INTRAC, West Berlin's BEWAG electricity company, and the PreussenElektra concern for the construction of power lines from the West German border town of Heimstedt across East German territory to West Berlin. By the end of 1991 West Berlin will be receiving more than ten percent of its present electricity requirements under the power-sharing arrangement. East Germany will also be able to draw supplies from the grid. The deal calls for a 350 million DM initial investment, jointly paid for by BEWAG and PreussenElektra. Work on constructing the power lines across the GDR was recently started. Under an earlier deal West Berlin was already getting Siberian gas pipeline supplies. Douhts were raised about the wisdom of relying on the Soviet Union for part of its gas when the project was first conceived in the early 1980s. But now supplies have been flowing for the past two years and the controversy has died away. Neale Marriott

Dr. Gunther Spur applies robotics to industry's practical needs.

Investment Mounts As City Stages Comeback

With more than 180 research institutes, West Berlin has become a major technological center; and the close links between business and industry are attracting new investors.

The robots in Dr. Gunther Spur's Institute for Production and Construction Technology (IPK) could whet anyone's technological appetite.

The ultra-modern glass-enclosed institute, which operates in cooperation with Berlin's Technical University, is a world-famous center for robotics and research on automation of industrial production techniques.

Dr. Spur, presently on a work trip to Asia, is an example of the close cooperation found between Berlin's research institutes and industry. His findings, colleagues say, are quickly converted to practical use by industry. In turn, industrial needs and questions are then acted on to stimulate further research.

IPK is only one of Berlin's more than 180 research and development institutes. With almost half of West Germany's research institutes. West Berlin has become a major center for industrial investment. Some of the institutes are supported by public subsidies, others by grants from major companies.

The range of these institutes corresponds to West Germany's industrial variety and extends from hasic research to applied research in the fields of micro-electronics and data processing, information systems and communication. Eighty percent of all research and development funds go to the fields of electrotechnology, chemistry, automotive in-the country. The West German government allows up to 75 percent depreciation of equipment during the first year or the first five years. Special low interest rates, considerably more favorable than in other parts of West Germany, are also available.

The city comprises an area as large as the combined size of Washington, D.C., Pittsburgh and Minneapolis, Its population is two million, of which an astonishing 100,000 are students.

But the history of the divided city has meant a slow return to its prewar status as a pioneering technological center. The world's first teletype machines were developed here. Berlin hosted the world's first television broadcast, and Berliners got to ride the world's first electric streetcar.

The rise of Nazi Germany drove away many of the city's foremost scientists and researchers. After the war, Berlin ceased to be the nation's capital. Instead, West Berlin was carved up under the rule of the Americans, French and British, a system which exists to this day, and what is now East Berlin fell under Soviet rule. Embassies left West Berlin for the new capital of Bonn, and many industries drifted westward.

But West Germany's wellthought-out program of incentives for both research and industry seems to be working.

Five large U.S. companies, in-

The Berlin Innovation Center, the Technology and Innovation Park, the new space institute at the Free University headed by a former Challenger astronaut, the Heinrich Herz Institute which explores the latest in television and optical communications, the Institute for Automonive Technologies, the Institute for Welding Research, and the Institute for Applied Information Processing are just a few examples of West Berlin's many research and development centers.

Some of the more unusual projects include the development of high-definition television and the so-called Bessy project, a large facility sponsored hy Philips. Siemens, and several other companies for the commercialization of synchrotron radiation (x-ray lithography) for micro-electronic chip manufacturing. "Bedin is making a comeback."

cro-electronic chip manufacturing. "Berlin is making a comeback," says Dr. Hans Ulrich Abshagen. a consultant who advises U.S. firms on Berlin relocation. "Economically, there is a new pioneer movement here."

The research facilities make Berlin particularly attractive to telecommunications, electronics, and computer companies. Generous tax benefits — which are not given in other West German cities — are also luring firms here.

Personal income tax is 30 percent lower than in other parts of West Germany, and the corporate tax is 22.5 percent lower than elsewhere in cluding pinball-machine maker Bally and optics concern Bausch and Lomb, have moved here during the past year, bringing the number of U.S. firms to about fifty.

Johnson and Johnson bought a major Berlin pharmaceutical company. Ford chose Berlin as the center for its Western European plastic production; and a major U.S. computer company is considering locating a printing plant for its computer programs here. The Eastern hloc represents a rel-

The Eastern bloc represents a relatively untapped consumer market for Western countries. And although certain NATO restrictions still exist on technology transfer between East and West, the present atmosphere of detente means that Berlin's research and development centers could soon be serving an eager East. Technological cooperation in turn will most likely lead to East-West joint ventures.

"East-West trade needs a mediating function, just as Hong Kong provides the link between the Far East and the United States," says Mr. Ahshagen. "Berlin knows both systems. It is the logical candidate for that role."

Meanwhile, overall investment figures seem to confirm the general optimism. In 1975, 1.122 hillion Deutsche marks were invested in West Berlin. In 1985, the figure rose to 2.136 hillion DM. This year, the estimated total investment will be 2.5 billion DM.

The preferred mix of residential, recreational, professional and socio-cul-tural facilities stands in stark contrast to the faceless rehabilitation

IBA's task — in this divided city ravaged by World War II and model of contemporary urban planning.

From Urban Demolition to Post-Modern Renewal

1970s, it was divided into two sec-tions: the first to meet the challenge of new urban constuction in the Berlin areas of Tegel, Prager Platz, the southern Tiergarten district and southern Friedrichstadt; the second, to renovate the areas of Luisenstadt and Eastern Kreuzberg. Until the end of 1983, IBA was financed by the Land Berlin (75 percent) and the Federal Republic of Germany (25 percent); since 1984, it has been sole-ly financed by the Land Berlin, at an estimated cost of 4 billion DM.

Alongside the concept of "critical reconstruction," with its search for an equilibrium between tradition and modernity, the Neubau (or new building) activities at IBA were guided by the idea of "critical pluralism," whose goal is to present numerous stylistic and philosophical approaches to contemporary architecture. "We wanted to involve the protagonists of the different theories of architecture. Among the internationally acclaimed architects who have built for the IBA are Aldo Rossi, Gustav Peichl, James Stirling, Giorgio Grassi, John Hejduk, Raimund Abraham and Morre/Ruble/Yudell. In 1979 when the Berlin House of Representatives called on the Bauaustellung Berlin GmbH to "save the ravaged city" in Kreuzberg, the area was "more badly af-fected by the redevelopment of the '60s and '70s than by the war and the wall," wrote IBA's renewal project director Waltherr Hämer.

Against a background of growing resistance and discontent in this rundown and threatened area, IBA developed an alternative and "more caring" 12-point program, for "Care-ful Urban Renewal." This stressed the importance of resident participation. It proposed that renewal work proceed in stages, allowing most residents to remain in their homes while renovation is going on. The cost of modernization under the 1BA program has averaged between 45 and 49 percent of the comparable costs for new construction, making it pos-sible for an unexpectedly high number of residents (95 percent) to remain in the area.

On January 1, 1986, the urban renewal project, including all its staff. was handed over to a private succes-sor company, STERN (Association for Careful Urban Renewal Berlin GmbH). Today, STERN is continuing the work begun by the IBA, which to date has resulted in the renovation of 5,200 apartments and 130 commercial units; the conversion and extension of five schools; the creation of 14 child care centers; and the planting of gardens in 320 courtyards.

Yet the renewal of Kreuzberg is far from completed. About 6,000 more apartments are in urgent need of renovation. As Jörg Dargel, a leading STERN staff and steering committee member said, "With our social orientation, we don't think the technical modernization of a house or the improvement of a kindergarten is enough to improve the quality of life. We want an integrated ap-proach to involve the participants." The current city government's policy, according to Mr. Dargel, is to restrict the IBA/STERN approach to the Kreuzberg area. Nevertheless, STERN's implementation of Careful Urban Renewal will continue. There is no responsible alternative for Berlin," he said.

Luxury Shops and Nighttime Fun

Maintained with the magnificence and luxury of a capital (which residents will tell you it has never ceased to be) West Berlin is a shopper's delight and a gourmet's paradise.

Much has been written about West Berlin's cultural life, its opera, ballet, music, cabaret and transvestite revues, but what of its splendid eating establishments: its restaurants, sidewalk cafes and pubs, of which the city has more than 5,000, most operating far into the night. And what of Berlin's many shops? With 12 districts, each with its own shopping course the city the scheme shore the each with its own shopping center, the city has about 40 department stores, more than any other European city. If West Berlin could be said to have a center then it is generally taken to be the easily identifiable old bomb-ruined Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church Tower at Breitscheid Platz. The new church stands alongside it.

On the Tauntzienstrasse, not far away, stands the KaDeWe ("Kaufhaus des Westens") department store. People spill out of the Wittenberg U-Bahn station and make a beeline for the KaDeWe. It is Germany's equivalent of Harrods in London, and stocks goods from all over the world across 43,000 square meters of floor space. It sells furs, perfumes, computers, toys, textiles and artworks — you name it, the KaDeWe is sure to have it, or will get it for you.

At the nearby Europa Center is a skyscraper office block which also houses an indoor three-story shopping and entertainment complex. For the visitor in a hurry to buy small gifts or souvenirs, this is the place to head for. Besides shops, it has quality nightclubs, restaurants, pubs, and the city's plush casino. West Berlin's tradition for cabaret with biting political satire still finds expression at the center's famous Stachelschweine (The Hedgehogs) theater. Wolfgang Gruner, a Berlin original if ever there was one, is one of the stars. He talks at the speed of gunfire, and if you cannot keep up, then watch his facial expressions. They are worth the entrance money alone. If you want to have a business lunch in a suitably conducive and congenial atmosphere, then you won't go wrong at the famous Kempinski Grill, housed in Berlin's renowned city-center hotel on the Kurfürstendamm. It seats 60 and needs no advertising for the excellence of its food and service. Another favored haunt for business people is the Hotel Berlin Grill-Restaurant on the Lützhof Platz. It offers a special three-course "business hunch" at 48 DM per person. On Kantstrasse, a parallel road to the Kurfürstendamm, is the Paris Bar restaurant where art works of prominent modern German painters adorn the walls. Showbiz personalities, artists, lecturers from the nearby Academy of Art, civil servants and stock market officials give testimony to the mixed clientele here. Popular with American tourists and business people visiting Berlin is Fofi's, a restaurant with a Greek proprietor and staff on Fasanenstrasse, an up-market property area. A signed and framed photograph of Michael Dukakis greets you above the cocktail bar. For good service on wooden tables and good-quality German fare, Hecker's Deele on the Grolmanstrasse remains popular with the business community. The Kurfürstendamm is back at its best, after years of looking somewhat dowdy. At night, crowds of wellheeled Germans and foreigners throng the elegant boulevard, as sleek Mercedes and BMWs glide by. The sidewalk cafés are packed and the discos are filled with young West Germans. Berlin remains by far Germany's most popular city for nighttime fun. Neale Marriott

Germany about 30 million DM (US $16 million), are hosted by the German Finance Ministry, the Bundesbank or central bank, the Ministry for Economic Cooperation, and the Berlin Finance Senator.

Berlin was chosen because it is the only German city with sufficient hotel capacity and a major conference center. The Finance Senator's office said it hopes the meetings will promote Berlin as a banking center. The event will pump 20 million DM to 25 million DM into the city's economy through hotels, restaurants and other businesses, Mr. Gross added.

As headquarters to such organizations as the Foundation for International Development and the Institute for Development Policies, Berlin is also the city that hosts the annual "Partners for Progress" Overseas Import Fair, which aims to help manufacturers from developing and newly industrialized countries enter Western markets. The fair ended on September 4.

Most IMF/World Bank meetings occur at their Washington headquarters. Every third meeting is held abroad, most recently in Seoul, South Korea, in 1985. The next meetings abroad are scheduled for Bangkok, Thailand, in 1991.

credited with masterminding this turn-around, talks about Berlin's "considerable locational advantages," compared to rival regions such as Stuttgart, Munich and the Ruhr. "This is confirmed," he said, by the number of new firms that have started up here, many of them in the service-facility sector. They offer their services close to the seat of production, and operate in the most diverse sectors - in research and development, in industrial design, engineering, software and advertising. There are sound reasons for this. Berlin is the biggest industrial city in Germany, making it a partment store, is putting on one of our promotions. Hans Georg Otto, of the Berlin Economic Development Corporation, said that more than 350 national and foreign enterprises had moved to Berlin in the 1980s, investing billions of Deutsche marks and creating 9,000 new jobs.

The West Berlin government set up the Economic Development Corporation in 1979, at a time when grave fears were being expressed about West Berlin's future in the wake of a drastic loss of industrial jobs. "We were faced with a tough task. The city was going through a image Berlin had in West Germany and abroad was a bad one, as a result of frequent and somewhat portant to make clear to them there violent demonstrations on the streets," Mr. Otto said. West Berlin: This Year's Cultural City of Europe Y

West Berlin's lively artistic present coupled with its rich history earned it the European Community's designation as the year's Cultural City (E'88).

Berlin is the first German city to be so named, and no one has even attempted to count the number of events competing for an audience since Claudia Skoda's multi-media fashion performance, "Dressed to Thrill," officially opened the Cultural City cycle on April 22. "There have been hundreds and hundreds," said Nele Herling, artistic director of Werkstatt (Workshop) Berlin, and one of the event's major organizers. "The basic idea was to get people here to work. To bring artists here, not just for a performance, but to stay longer and give meaning and strength to the concept of Berlin as an international meeting and working place."

Even under ordinary circumstances, there is always something of cultural interest happening here. The museum complex is vast. An estimated 2,000 artists work in West Berlin, and more than 200 galleries are located in the city. The Berlin Philharmonic and Radio Symphony Orchestras are world renowned. as is the Deutsche Oper Berlin. There is also classical, jazz, rock and experimental music, as well as musical theater. In addition to 18 staterun and private theaters, West Berlin plays host to about 150 fringe Only one year after celebrating its 750th birthday, West Berlin is in the midst of another round of largescale festivities — this time to celebrate the city's designation as Cultural City of Europe 1988.

livity in the divided city is increasing, thanks to Berlin's attraction as a natural backdrop, its excellent production facilities, the planned Filmhaus Esplanade and generous financial support. The International Building Exhibition 1987 (IBA) has brought the city's contemporary architecture to international attention. The city is also an important center for fashion and design. Writers discuss their work in the beautifully refurbished Literaturhaus Berlin. And then there are the traditional Berlin Festivals, includ-ing the widely attended Berliner Film Festival, Theatretreffen (Theater Meeting) Berlin and Berliner Festwochen

Artists of all nationalities and orientations have long found Berlin a good place to work because of its relatively easy way of life and the freedom of expression allowed (and one might even say fostered) by its anomalous walled-in position. The E'88 Werkstatt program sought to involve young and established artists, art-lovers and students, in the process of creation, rather than in the final product, through a wide-theater and dance groups. Film ac- ranging series of symposia, performance projects, with multi-media connections particularly promoted. There have been many precursors to this year's spotlighted workshop orientation. First and foremost, for the past 25 years the Berlin Artists' Program of the DAAD (German Academic Exchange Program) has been inviting international artists of the first rank to live and work in Berlin. Many other organizations, such as the Goethe-Institut, also have a tradition of sponsoring interdisciplinary symposia and workshops in Berlin. In addition, Berlin's "alternative" creative spaces, of which the UFA Fabrik is a prime example, have served as ongoing, community-oriented workshops. "Berlin - Venue of the New,"

served as the backdrop for key exhibits including "Positions of Pre-sent-Day Art" at the National Gallery; Harald Szeeman's "Zeitlos" or 'Timeless'' at the Hamburger Bahnhof, and the upcoming "Stages of Modern Art" at the Martin-Gropius-Bau. Divided West Berlin is a young city which, in its short history, has traditionally had an eye and ear out for new developments, and proved itself open to foreign currents.

Several Werkstatt projects, such as the international dance workshop and the London Sinfonicita and Ensemble Modern (Frankfurt's contemporary music workship with Berlin school children), may possibly be continued. The city has also grown richer in exhibition and performance spaces, thanks in part to efforts undertaken for the Cultural City of Europe year. And for the many indigenous Berlin groups which felt slighted by. or in compe-tition with, the E'88 proceedings, the Culture Senate's acknowledged attempt to "try everything this year" may yield future benefits. As Matthias Osterwald of Freunde Guter Musik Berlin noted, "I know the politicians will be wondering what they can do after two years of cultural input and increased spending. And I feel there's a greater readiness to support us."

Air Travelers Wait After False Start to Price War

The wait continues for lower air fares to West Berlin, despite an attempt earlier this year to increase competition by raising the number of flights and airlines permitted to fly to the city.

Only airlines belonging to the three Western World War II Allies are allowed to fly there. So, intil recently, the traveler's choice was limited to Pan American World Airways, British Airways, Air France and a few regional airlines. In May, the Allied civil air attachés, who must approve all flight and fare changes to Berlin, aimed to improve service by allowing three additional airlines to fly to Berlin. They also approved hundreds of domestic flights, on routes such as Frankfurt-Berlin, previously flown only by Pan Am.

Trans World Airlines promptly planned to offer an introductory round-trip fare to Frankfurt of 159 DM, below the existing discount fare of 254 DM. With Euro-Berlin France, a new Air France-Lufthansa joint venture, scheduled to take off in November and Pan Am already vowing to match TWA's fares, German newspapers declared: "The price war in Berlin air travel has begun." But the attachés did not approve the price cut.

"We were very disappointed," said Charles Adams, senior vice president of TWA's Internation Division in London. "But we haven't given up. With lower prices, people could tap their discretionary income. Fare flexibility would create tremendous demand."

KRONE supplies these networks.

A World Bank Conference is being held in Berlin to discuss the development in the Third World countries. The central issue concerns those countries who are seeking the development of their infrastructure through the World Bank.

For 60 years Berlin has been the headquarters of KRONE AG - who are one of the leading manufacturers and suppliers of telecommunication networks and systems to over 60 countries - including the Thirld World.

Like the World Bank - KRONE is actively involved in development projects worldwide and, through its patented KRONE-LSA-PLUS Quick Connection System has been a key partner in the installation of telecommunication networks in the Thirld World countries.

KRONE systems are easy to install, are reliable in even the most extreme climatic conditions and provide a cost-effective solution to the improvement of communication systems - and hence the economic and social conditions in the Third World.

Europe's bank managers count on Siemens Computing Nothing affects a bank's image as much as the quality of its professional advice. And that can now become significantly better, thanks to MXB, Siemens' new multi-function, multiaccess computer.

In plain English: every bank consultant has a terminal at his desk, which is a personal computer and text processor at the same time. He can access both internal and external data bases. The MXB now provides him with a great deal of precise and up-to-date information he previously had to collect bit by bit.

The financial consultant thus becomes an all-rounder. He can work out mortgages, savings schemes, or yield forecasts using today's data. Interest calculations or statements of account are printed out immediately. Even cash transactions can be carried out on the spot using the automatic strong-box, without having to queue up or run back and forth between cash desk and advice point.

MXB is not all Siemens has to offer as Europe's largest manufacturer of computers and communications. There is also a complete range of hardware and software for the banking industry.

PARIS — The art market structure is undergoing a deep transformation process and the 14th Biennale of Antique Dealers at the Grand Palais provides striking evidence of a new awareness of this among the world's leading dealers. The urge to be seen and project a brilliant image is now affecting even those who are most solidly established.

Painted by Hendrik Goltzius in 1616, this is one of the earliest compositions in the new 17th-century style that was being devised by the Dutch school, with its strong penchant for realistic handling and psychological por-traying. No other sizable painting by the artist has appeared in the market in the last two decades, hence the $3 million tag attached to it.

Until three or four years ago, a work of that importance would have been negotiated behind closed doors by springing the surprise on a few, well-chosen curators or millionaire collectors. Meissner says he came in order to become known to a wider circle, and showing the Goltzins is a most effective way to achieve that goal.

The display of two of the four Evangelists by Valentin de Boulogne sold as a set for 6.89 million francs (about $1.08 million) last June in Paris answers another purpose. 'Patty Hearst': A Superb Film

By Vincent Canby New York Times Service

DATTY Hearst, aka Tania, a member of the self-styled Symbionese Liberation Army, and two of her SLA comrades sit on a bed in an anonymous Los Angeles motel room and watch a "live" telecast as the police storm their SLA hideout in another part of the city. Everyone in the house is finally killed

It is only by chance that Patty and the other two are not in the house.

Says Patty, when the televised siege is all over, "They didn't even try to take us alive." This sense of cerie disconnection, of being a participant in events while also being detached from them, is not something that is often dramatized with any success. Even when it is, as in Paul Schrader's fine new film "Patty Hearst," it tends to be chilling and off-putting. It does not make for the kind of neat movie in which one immediately knows bow one is supposed to respond. The success of "Patty Hearst," directed by Schrader from the screenplay by Nicholas Kazan, is that it avoids imposing any kind of reassuring order on the harrowing, real-life story of the Hearst pub-demands on the audience.

For the next six weeks she was kept in a closet, blindfolded, and subjected to periodic indoctrina-

Much like someone kept too long in a zero-gravity tank, Hearst lost all sense of direction and identity, though without losing the memory of her earlier life.

It is something movie audiences have to deal with when watching it. When, finally, the SLA gave Hearst the choice to go free, which she thought might be a trick to kill her, or to join their revolution, she joined. For the next 18 months, she remained with the SLA as a seemingly loyal member of the group's increasingly addled-brained, dangerous missions.

papping, her transformation into a bank-robbing "urban guerrilla," her capture, trial, sentence and presidential pardon -- remains a haunting one, at least in part because it seems so commonplace, yet inexplicable.

The film's Hearst, played by Natasha Richardson in an absolutely smashing performance, is a decentintelligence, emotionally equipped to cope with nothing much more complex than her classes, family life and routine relationships.

However, in the context of ficnional movies about ordinary people who are thrown into extraordinary eircumstances and subsequently triumpb, Patty Hearst tooks like a perfect void. To a certain extent, she is.

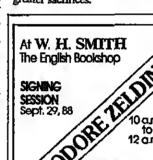

"Patty Hearst" is a model of swift, spare, unsentimental film making about a character who can

It is stylized at times, utter-ty direct and both shocking and gility of personality and the sometimes remarkable success that can be gained by fanatics of an initially grimly funny.

Beginning with Rhames, every member of the supporting cast is excellent. Richardson goes beyond that, if possible.

There is not a wasted gesture or word. The flat, slightly nasal mono-tone, which is her California accent, defines the light-lipped temper of the movie.

"Patty Hearst" would rather say too little than too much.

would require a taxpayer bailout of at least $20 billion. ""If you have to list the top five issues facing the next adminis-fration, this is on the list," said Robert E. Litan, an economist at the Brookings Institution.

In the presidential race, with both candidates conspicuously avoiding the difficult issues of the day, the plight of the savings institutions is not immediately apparent as a campaign topic. One reason is that both parties can be blamed, and neither has one reason is that both parties can be blamed, and licture has devised a vote-getting, partisan solution. . The Democrats, who might normally be expected to attack on the issue, have their own difficulties with it. One of their leading congressional figures, Representative Jim Wright of Texas, has been accused of protecting his political friends in the Texas savings industry. And Republicans could face charges that the Reagan adminis-tration's encouragement of deregulation produced an environ-ment in which poorly and fraudulently managed savings institutions were free run up enormous losses without anyone to answer

N ADDITION, proposals to spend the taxpayers' money to correct the problem, which many analysis now take as a given, are not politically attractive when both sides are vowing to reduce the budget deficits by restraining spending for a lot of popular causes.

"I don't believe Bush or Dukakis will have a choice," said Roger Altman, a New York investment banker and former Treasury official who is also an adviser to Michael S. Dukakis, the Democratic candidate. "It is not a matter of choosing to address it early. It's a matter of being forced to address it." Martin S. Feldstein at Harvard, a former chief economic adviser to President Ronald Reagan and now an adviser to Vice President George Bush, the Republican candidate, agreed. "The patient is bleeding," he said. "The sooner you act, the less blood you lose."

Senator Phil Gramm, Republican of Texas and co-anthor of Congress's budget-balancing law, said: "A bad thing has hap-pened. Somebody has to pay for it. Who's it going to be? The important thing is to move ahead quickly and boldly."

Many people with an interest in the plight of the insolvent savings institutions are devising solutions of their own for the next administration and Congress to consider as nonpartisan concern for the economy and the banking system, not politics, force the issue.

Some of the solutions are similar to the one Mr. Proximire made on Thursday: the taxpayer bailout, along with tighter regulation thwart the industry's loose banking practices, and denying Dollar Target Is Opposed NEW YORK — A key advisor to Michael S. Dukakis, the U.S. Democratic presidential candidate, said Friday that he opposed targeting an exchange rate level for the dollar if it were to lead to high interest rates and a recession.

Lawrence Summers, professor of economics at Harvard University, also said it was impossible to say at what level the dollar should trade to correct world trade imbalances.

"No one can say where the dollar has to go to equilibrate things," he said, "but it would be inappropriate for U.S. monetary policy to be held bostage to any particular dollar target if this would risk high interest rates and recession."

Mr. Summers was speaking after a luncheon address in New York. Reiterating a Dukakis theme, Mr. Summers said increases in taxes should be used only as a last resort to bring down the federal hudget deficit. Instead, he advocated cuts in military and domestic outlays, while at the same time bolstering enforcement of tax collection. He also indicated that he opposes any cuts that would affect the Social Security fund, saying the fund should be allowed to grow and make a contribution to national savings.

Mr. Summers said the next president must take the lead in tackling trade issues. He said he opposed protectionism as a means of dealing with the U.S. trade deficit.

the case this summer, it can be an effort to stop a rise of the dollar. The central banks try to send a message to the markets about dollar policy, though the message may be ignored.

Intervention also can be aimed at restoring order in a disorderly market. And in some instances, such as after the assassination attempt against President Ronald Reagan in 1981, it is intended to prevent the market from overreacting to an unexpected event.

The transactions are carried out in sever-tion operation, and the Federal Reserve Board in Washington. The reasons for intervening vary. As was its egent. Thus the transaction is in the its agent. Thus the transaction is in the name of the bank, not the government. If the Federal Reserve wants to be more public in an effort to amplify the effect of the intervention, it can call several banks and just ask for a currency price and do a deal. In that case, the word gets around quickly. The Federal Reserve also enhances its operation if it can catch the market by surprise and create some uncertainty. It is also more likely that intervention cember, raising fears of a free-fall and the specter of a major recession. The Federal Reserve, which usually this summer inter the second trades in New York, made its impact much stronger by beginning to buy dollars in Asia on Monday morning, which was still Sunday night, New York time.

The buying continued as the markets opened in Europe and New York. By Monday morning in New York, Fed-eral Reserve officials, according to some traders, were openly telling dealers that the central banks were serious about stopping

Some traders and economists argue that this summer's intervention showed that the method works.

Others come to the opposite conclusion. They argue that intervention alone cannot turn the market. A broader change in economic policy, including changing interest rates, is necessary, they argue.

The consensus, based on interviews with traders and economists, is that intervention, if it is to work, has to be coordinated by the United States and its allies.

Gillette Workers Fight to Save Razor Factory in France By Jacques Neher because demand for its main product - double-edged razor blades — is falling as dispos-able razors become more popular, and because Gillette says it is under pressure to cut costs to Special to the Herald Tribune

PARIS - Four hundred workers at a Gillette Co. razor-blade factory in Annecy, backed by the French government, are trying to reverse plans by the Boston-based company to close the plant. Gillette employees in Annecy, a tourist town in the French Alps, say they are ready to negotiate a range of givebacks. If that fails, they are prepared to promote a boycott Gillette products in France,

The effort, waged with the help of local and national government officials, appears to be paying off. Gillette promised during a meeting in Paris on Friday between Derwyn F. Phillips, executive vice president, and Roger Fanroux, the French industry minister, that the company would discuss "with the utmost seriousness any proposals to keep the plant open.

A plant closing "would be an unfriendly measure that would have disastrous consequences for the image of Gillette," Mr. Fauroux said after the meeting.

The plant has been threatened in recent years mountain climbers scaled Mont Blanc in Chamonix, Enrope's highest summit. They planted a flag that said " No' to the closing of the Gillette plant," fend off takeovers. Workers contend that the plant is profitable.

They also said they would be hans said.

Gillette sales in France topped 1 hillion frances ($155 million) in 1987, Mr. Toubhans said. It controls about 40 percent of the French market for shaving foams and more than 75 percent of the market for disposable razors. The Annecy facility, which has been threat-ened for several years, makes 600 million blades a year, molded plastic for disposable razors that are assembled at Gillette plants in London and Berlin, and a small line of cosmetics.

placed national newspaper advertisements attacking the company. "Gillette is shaving France," the ads declared, along with an illus-tration of a bloodied razor labeled "USA." Workers and city officials say the new threat came from pressure placed on management to cut costs after takeover attempts by Coniston Group and Revion Inc.

TWO LIVES, ONE RUSSIA

By Nicholas Daniloff. 307 pages. $19.95. Houghton Mifflin, One Beacon Street, Boston, Mass., 02108. Reviewed by Harrison E. Salisbury

S INCE the reign of Ivan the Terrible, secret police agencies have played an important, sometimes the most important role, in Russian governance. That continuity and the deadly thrust it has given to Russian life lie at the heart of Nicholas Daniloff's remarkable work, "Two Lives, One Russia."

This is a double story, Daniloff's account of his arrest in Moscow as an American correspondent in 1986, and that of his great-great-grandfather. Alexander Frolov. one of a group of young Russian officers whose arrest in the "Decembrist conspiracy" of 1825 led Czar Nicholas I to create the Third Department of his Imperial Chan-cellery, direct ancestor of today's KGB.

The parallels between Daniloff and his famous ances-tor are not very close. Frolov spent 10 years in prison and 20 years in Siberian cule. He was guilty of the charge against him. Daniloff spent 14 nervous days in charge against him. Danilott spent 14 theroous tays in Moscow's old Lefortovo prison from Aug. 30 to Sept. 12 in 1986. He was guilty of oothing, an accidental pawn in the endless and often aimless game of spy and counter-spy played by Soviet and American security agencies. Daniloff was packing up to leave Moscow after five years as correspondent for U.S. News & World Report when he upserfunction of U.S. News & World Report when he was arrested. His Russian was fluent. He knew all about the Soviet police and their shoddy tricks. He took reasonable care against provocation but, oow and then, he let his guard down. He could not cut himself off from all Russian contacts even though he was well aware that some of the Russians hc met were bound to be provocateurs. One such, as it turned out, was "Misha from Frunze," a chance acquaintance who foisted on Daniloff a packet of photographs and maps and set the American up for arrest.

Another enigmatic figure was "Father Roman," who thrust upon Daniloff a letter to be delivered to the American ambassador. Daniloff should have followed his wife Ruth's instant response: "Burn it." He didn't. He took it to the American Embassy. In a bitter coda to his account of his arrest and imprisonment, Daniloff reveals that after his release he learned that at the embassy the "Father Roman" letter had been given to the CIA station chief in Moscow who then contacted Roman. Moreover, the agency had used Damloff's name in monitored phone calls and in at least one open letter. Fortunately for Daniloff his case became an international sensation. President Ronald Reagan and Mik-hail Gorbachev personally became involved. With all this hubbub Daniloff was released. So was Gennadi Zakharov and that was the main point. Zakharov, a Soviet employee, had been arrested in New York City by the FBL Daniloff's arrest in Moscow was a simple diplomatic ploy, the basis for a trade, you release our man, we release yours.

What was striking about the Daniloff case, as his book makes clear, was the care with which material against him had been stockpiled over the years in the event the KGB at some moment would find it in their interest to put him in custody.

And even more important is the question posed by Daniloff: "Why did the FBI arrest Gennadi Zakharov, a Soviet physicist assigned to the United Nations secretariat, just weeks before an expected summit?"

Daniloff provides no answer but for years observers have noted with curiosity the frequency with which have noted with curiosity the frequency with which headlined incidents, usually involving spying or intelli-gence, seem to occur at moments when the United States and the Soviet Union are groping toward better relations. It could be just coincidence. Some have suggested that the shadow of summitry is a propitious time for daring espionage exploits since chiefs of state might be reluctant to blow a whistle.

In fact, whatever its origin, the Daniloff case was handled with considerable diplomatic skill in both Washington and Moscow. It was used by Washington to obtain the release of the dissident Yuri Orloy and some other detainces as the two sides agreed to a new summit meeting in Iceland. If anyonc on either side had thought that the Zak-harov-Daniloff case would seriously derail U.S.-Soviet relations, they were disappointed. But it has left disturbing and unanswered questions.

Harrison E. Salisbury was for many years Moscow correspondent of The New York Times. He wrote this for

Mets Seal NL East; Phillies Fire Manager The league championship series

SPORTS

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches begins Oct. 4, most likely against NEW YORK - For the second time in three years, the New York Mets marched to the championship of the National League's East Division Thursday, and they did it with a fury as they won their eighth straight game, the 13th in their last 14 and the 23rd in their last 28. They dinched it with flair when Ron Darling pitched them to a 3-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies before a roaring hometown crowd. Darling hurled a six-hitter, and Don Carman threw a wild pitch that allowed the go-ahead run in the sixth inning. On Friday, the Phillies fired manager Lee Elia and named coach John Vukovich as interim manager. Elia, 51, was hired in June 1987, replacing John Felske. The Phillies have lost 33 of their last 47 games. When the Mets game was done, the players ran to their clubhouse and started spraying champagne. But no fans stormed the field, as they did violently in 1986, when the Mets won the division, the pennant and the World Series. Nobody took to the field this time because it was ringed by an army of police officers: 80 on three hits and two runs batted in to guards hired for stadium security. losing streak. (NYT, AP, UPI)

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

European Horses Fly In For Paydirt on U.S. Grass

By Steven Crist New York Times Service

NEW YORK -Once again, horses with mediocre form in Europe are piling onto airplanes to plunder America's richest grass races. This year, even more than in the past, they are likely to come away with most of the booty, beginning with the $596,000 Man o' War Stakes this weekend at New York's Belmont Park.

This year's American dirt horses may well be the strongest group in a decade, but the grass horses could be the weakest. No one has come along to take the place of last year's stars, Manila and Theatrical, who could beat Europe's best.

In their absence, the best of the Americans this year is Equalize, but he is passing the mile-and-three-eighths Man o'War because he is being shortened up in distance to point for the Breeders' Cup Mile on Nov. 5.

The pattern this year is that the European who most recently stepped off the runway is the winner.

This is as good a way as any of picking the winner of these races, since European form seems to mean relatively little once these horses cross the Atlantic.

The Man o' War drew five imports and four locals. The newest arrivals for the race are Merce Cunningham and Polar Gap, both quarantined at New York's Aqueduct track after arriving here from France earlier in the week.

Face Nord, who flew in three weeks ago and ran third in the Lawrence Realization, will be making his second American start. Coenr de Lion and Pay the Butler, who almost seem like natives now that they have been here all summer, complete the foreign contingent the Dodgers in Los Angeles. The World Series begins on Oct. 15 against the champion of the American League Padres 5, Dodgers 4: In Los An-geles, Carmelo Martinez snapped an eighth-inning tie with his second home run of the game for San Die-go. The Dodgers' "magic number" for winning the National League West remained at three.

Reds 3, Giants 1: In Cincinnati, Jack Armstrong, Rob Murphy and John Franco combined on a threehitter for the victory over San Francisco. Murphy is 0-6 in 72 appear-ances this season. Toronto's Tom Henke set the major-league record for one season when he made 72 appearances without a win last year, going 0-6 with 34 saves. Astros 3, Braves 2: In Houston Craig Biggio homered and Billy Hatcher hit a run-scoring single in a two-run seventh inning for the victory over Atlanta.

Tigers 7, Orioles 4: In the American League, in Baltimore, Tom Brookens and Dave Bergman drove in two runs apiece to spark Detroit

China Blows 5-Point Lead, Loses Women's Volleyball Match to Peru

Compiled In Our Staff From Dispatches SEOUL -China's women's volleyball team, the Olympic and world champion, was upset Friday by Peru after wasting a five-point head in the deciding game. The Chinese were leading by 14-9 in the final set but ended up losing, 15-13, 13-15, 15-7, 12-15, 14-16.

"We made many mistakes and that is uncharacteristic of the Chinese team," said the coach, Li Xiaoxian. But, be added, "We're very likely to meet again and when we do, we will play bener."

Poolside, the World Muscles In SEOUL -For every disgrantied U.S. swimmer at the Olympic pool, there is a happy Australian. Or Hungarian. Or Bulgarian.

Parity of the international athletic variety has come to the 1988 Olympics and has taken a firm hold on lanes 1 through 8 of the Olympic Park Indoor Swimming Pool.

On the first day of Olympic swimming competition last Monday, four events were held and 12 medals were given out. In previous Olympics, the United States and East Germany probably would have dominated those events, winning not only the gold but a number of silvers and bronzes.

But these days, Olympic swimming has become an aquatic geography lesson. Ten nations won those first 12 medals, France, China, Great Britain and Sweden among them. To show how stunning this was, in 1976, the last nonboycotted Olympics, only eight na-tions won medals by the time every event in men's and women's swimming was completed in Montreal. In only one day here, the 1988 swimming competition had sur-passed that. After four days of fin-name? That's parity."

als, 19 nations had won 57 medals. East Germany had 17 and the me is not the problem. Scheduling race.

Contrast that to 1988, in which ican who finished seventh in the 200-meter backstroke finals here. "Psychologically it's hard to improve yourself in three weeks of hard work and two weeks of taper-. ing. It might be time to come up with an Olympic selection a couple months earlier."

"There's no doubt about it, the trials are too close to the Olym-pics," said the U.S. assistant coach, Mark Schubert. "Five and a half weeks is not enough time to prepare for one big meet," the trials, "then prepare for another," the Olympics. "But there also is no doubt we can't do it any other way as long as our swimmers are in college and training for college meets in the spring. If we held the trials in May, which might be the perfect time, our swimmers wouldn't be ready for them yet."

In college, U.S. athletes swim distances in yards, not meters. "It's not the same sport," said Dennis Pursley, an American who has coached in Australia and Canada.

A 100-meter race is more than nine yards longer than a 100-yard .

Supersonal States

U.S. men have won three golds, three silvers and a bronze and U.S. women, two golds and a bronze. Since 1984, only two swimmers from each country can enter individual events at the Games, so it is not possible to sweep all medals in an event, as the United States did many times in previous Olympics. Still, on the first day of preliminaries, three of eight U.S. swimmers did not even qualify for the finals in their evenus. The most glorious triumph belonged to an Anstralian, Duncan Armstrong, who beat Mart Biondi of the United States and Michael Gross of West Germany in the 200-meter freestyle. Two days later, Anthony Nesty of Suriname defeated Biondi by one-hundredth of a second to win the 100-meter hutterfly and became his nation's first Olympic medalist, Nesty and Armstrong attend college in Florida and train in the United States. "We've been saying it for the last eight to 10 months - there's parity in international swimming," said Ray Essick, director of U.S. Swimming, the national swimming fed-

For First Track Gold

By William Gildea Washington Post Service

SEOUL - Rosa Mota of Portugal took the world's best women's tance runners on a tour of Scoul's expressways and streets Tiday, then left them for a dash to se gold medal in the marathon she has come to dominate.

Mota, who won the world championship last year in Rome, palled away from Anstralia's Lisa Martin and East Germany's Kathrin Dorre as the nanners passed tantalizingly close to the Olympic Stadium. But they still had to make a loop through neighborhood streets, and on that flat, final stretch, Mota demonstrated with a near sprint why she has won 10 of her 13 marathons, including the last two in Boston.

Her time for the race of 26 miles, 385 yards (42.2 kilometers), a time of 2 hours, 25 minutes, 39 seconds, was almost a minute slower than Joan Benoit's gold medal effort four years ago in the first Olympic wom-en's marathon, was off her own three-year-old best of 2:23:29 and was well short of Ingrid Kristiansen's world best of 2:21:06. But it was 13 seconds better than that of Martin, the runner-up. The former student at the University of Oregon, was second in 2:25:52, while Kathrin Doerre of East Germany won the bronze medal in 2:26:20.

And the spectators who lined the streets were treated to a thrilling tactical race that had Mota, Martin, Dorre and the Soviet Union's little Tatiana Polovinskaya running together much of the last half. Mota proved to be releatless, refusing to give away her lead. Once each, Dorre and Polovinskaya edged ahead, but Mota took the advantage right back on the way to the first track and field gold medal of the Olympics.

foot-1-inch (1.5-meter), 99-pound (45-kilogram) runner with a shout. It's downhill the rest of the way! Go fast if you feel good enough. All along the way, spectators of-fered polite applause and shouts of encouragement. Three miles after the runners took off from the Olympic Stadium like a thundering herd -- two momentarily tumbled on the running track - they had spread out and come to the crest of a hill, the highest point on the extremely flat course. Norway's Grete Waitz, the silver medalist in Los Angeles, led for a time. But Mota surged ahead on the curving downhill off the bridge. and Martin and Dorre went with her, Waitz faded and dropped out after two-thirds of the race, unable to go on after arthroscopic knee surgery last month.

Temperatures had inched up to almost hot and humid by the time Mota had circled the track back in the stadium, waving triumphantly, in particular to Portugese fans waving flags.

But the sixth of the eight days of Olympic swimming belonged to Kristin Otto, an East German of amazing versatility. She won the women's 100-meter freestyle Monday and the 100-meter backstroke Thursday, and Friday she won the 100-meter butterfly. No swimmer had ever achieved that triple crown in an Olympics or a world championship

Ono has four gold medals here, including one in a relay, and she is not done. She will swim in the 400meter medley relay Saturday, with a gold medal likely, and the 50meter freestyle Sunday, with a medal possible but a gold unlikely. So she should finish with five gold medals and perhaps six medals in all. Biondi has two more events, too, and should finish with seven medals, four gold. Onto said all she really wanted to win here was the 100-meter free-style, in which she holds the world record, so everything else has been a bonus.

Defector Is Worth His Weight in Gold

ANKARA - Turkey paid Bulgaria $1 million to let Naim Suleymanoglu, a world champion weight lifter, com-pete to Scoul, Prime Minister Turgut Ozal said Friday. Ozal said the payment for Soleymanoglu, who defected to Turkey in 1986, was made to get Bulgaria to waive a rule that could prevent a defector from taking part in the Olympics for three years. Suleyman-oglu set three world records Tuesday and is due home to a bero's welcome on Saturday.

The only American medal of the night came in the relay, where a world record was expected and de-livered. The team of Chris Jacobs. Troy Dalbey. Tom Jager and Biondi won in 3:16.53. They broke the 1985 world mark of 3:17.08 hy a United States national team also anchored by Biondi, Here, Jacobs swam his leg in 49.63 seconds, Dal-bey in 49.75, Jager in 49.34 and Biondi in 47.81.

Dassler's victory was no surprise because he was ranked No. I in the world last year. But the race was so close that in the last half-lap four of the eight finalists had a chance.

Matt Cetlinski of the United States took the lead at 225 meters and stayed there intil 25 meters remained. In the drive to the finish wall, Dassler beat Duncan Armstrong of Australia by a foot, with Artur Wojdat of Poland another foot behind. Cetlinski faded to fourth.

Dassler's time was 3:46.95. He broke the world mark of 3:40.90. He broke the world mark of 3:47.38 setby Wojdat last March in Orlan-do, Florida.

In the men's 200-meter breaststroke, Joszek Szabo, the world champion from Hungary, beat Nick Gillingham of Britain in 2:13.52, the second fastest time EVEL.

The women's 100-meter breaststroke resulted in a major upset. Tania Dangalakova beat Antoaneta Frenkova, her Bulgarian team-mate, in 1:07.95, an Olympic record. Favored Silke Hörner, East Germany's world champion and world record-holder, settled for the oonal Park Service historians who are restoring and refurnishing the birthplace of the 27th president of the United States. The site was opened on Sept. 17, two days after the 131st anniversary of Taft's hirth. Taft, the only president who also served as chief justice of the United States, grew up in "a relatively high-class home," said Sarah Ol-son, chief of the historic furnishings division of the Park Service's interpretive design center. Taft's father, Alphonso, who was secretary of war and attorney general under President Ulysses S. Grant, bought the house in 1851.

According to a Park Service report written by Olson, the hilltop home was, hy 19th-century stan-dards, a country bouse or villa. The report also said that in the 1850s the two-story brick house was "a large, but oot imposing, Italianate structure with no particular architectural merit." After the Tafts sold the house in 1899, it remained in private hands until the Taft Memorial Association acquired it in 1961. Congress designated the property the William Howard Taft National Historic Site in 1969.

Restoration began six years ago. Except for landscaping, the bome's exterior has been restored to its appearance in 1868, the year, historians estimate, that the earliest known photograph of the entire house was taken. The exterior work of the pieces it set out to locate; took three years, cost $1 million and was completed in 1985, said the site superintendeot. Steven Kesselman.

Interior restoration began last fall with what had been the parlor, front hall, library and nursery, as well as three rooms for exhibitions. The four household rooms, chosen because they were the most thor- been broken up," be said.

oughly documented, will look as they did between 1854, when Taft's parents were married, and 1877, when a fire led to extensive remod-

When it came to refurnishing, Olson said historians had an exceptional amount of material to work from, "In terms of letters, it's probably the best-documented interior I've ever seen," she said. Those counts of the furniture, like the Like dozens of others, this letter proved invaluable to the U.S. Na-table. In some cases, bowever, hisdescription of the parlor's center torians had to piece together information to learn about the decor. "You really have to look closely at their lives, because comments that don't necessarily relate directly to the furniture will imply certain functions that took place in the bouse." Olson said. "There are many descriptions of the family sit-ting around the center table reading in the evening. That implies, in addition to the center table, a certain number of chairs and lights." There is no complete inventory of the bouse and its original contents. However, Taft's grandfather, Peter Rawson Taft, twice made up a list of the books and pamphlets in the library. These lists, included among the William Howard Taft papers at the Library of Congress, made it easier to re-create a portion of the collection. Few of the Tafts' own furnishings will be on display, since virtually all the originals have been lost. Olson said. As a result, historians concentrated on procuring pieces believed to be identical to, or replicas of, those owned by the family. In addition to scouring anoques markets and shows, and advertising in antiques magazines, Kessel-man said, the Park Service publicized its search in towns along the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, where Cincionati-made furniture may have heen shipped. The Park Service has obtained about 90 percent oearly all were either donated or purchased with privately raised fuods, Kesselman said.

Amoog the items were a few pleasant surprises, he added, particularly a complete seven-piece parlor set comprising a sofa and six chairs. "We had assumed that after all that time, most sets would have
